1873. A SCORE OF YEARS. 1893.

Martin Thornton's Career as a Caterer in this City.

On September 18, 1873, just twenty years ago yesterday Martin Thornton opened a restaurant on Market street, in this city. It was a very modest enterprise, but the proprietor was energetic, and his persistent efforts to please were soon rewarded with a large share of the public patronage. It was not long until the volume of business was found to be too great for the little establishment, and he then moved to No. 1155 Market street.

The "Capitol" restaurant was then opened, opposite the Register office, and successfully conducted for eight years, while Martin's fame as a caterer spread over three states. He established a standard of quality and moderate prices, which his competitors tried in vain to reach, and he witnessed a score of failures in the restaurant business.

Meanwhile the "Capitol" prospered. Six years ago, its proprietor, in order to increase his facilities for catering to the local and transient trade, opened up the Brunswick Hotel, at No. 1135 Market street, which at that time was badly run down. Mr. Thornton found it a difficult task to successfully combat the bad reputation which the house had earned, but his indomitable pluck was again displayed, and to-day no hotel in the city enjoys a better reputation.

The qualities to which must be ascribed in a measure the remarkable success which Mr. Thornton has met during his continuous business career of two decades are his sterling integrity, his courteous treatment of guests and the unsurpassed accommodations and reasonable charges at his hostelry. The INTELLIGENCER joins with the host of Martin's friends in congratulating him upon the successful anniversary and extending best wishes for a continuation of his prosperous business career.

Mr. Thornton thanks his many friends in Wheeling and surrounding towns for their liberal patronage and respectfully invites a continuance of the same.
